This highly successful charter yacht was the first Oceanfast yacht to be built to a Donald Starkey design and has a sophisticated sense of fun about her, combining a fast cruising speed of around 24 knots with a richly decorated mahogany and marble interior. PERFECT PERSUASION also benefited from a substantial interior refurbishment in 2002. The saloon, situated on the main deck, is furnished in the style of an English library with mahogany panelling, deep leather reading chairs and a marble chess table, achieving an atmosphere of elegantly refined comfort. Sliding doors open into the dining saloon whose light environment is provided by vast bay windows and a fibre optic design. Forward of the main living areas lies the master stateroom, decorated in a stylish yet simple fashion and the master bathroom which is finished in onyx. An office filled with the natural light from its four large ovoid windows, a dressing area and a second bathroom complete the suite. A magnificent stairway leads from the main lobby to the guest accommodation in four spacious cabins on the lower deck, which also convert into two full width VIP cabins. The same stairway also rises up to the upper deck saloon, decorated in similar comfort and style. On the sun deck the helm station sits forward of the centrally located Jacuzzi and bar, behind which lie two tenders and two personal watercraft. In the year of her launch, PERFECT PERSUASION won the ShowBoats award for the best semi displacement motor yacht.
